Sensitivity and sincerity characterize Miss Florence Fuller, who completes eighteen successful years of Oracle advisorship this year.

Miss Fuller, English teacher for twenty years at Sexton high school, is remembered by her former students and associates as a teacher "who cares so much" and "who gave me the extra chance." Miss Fuller's delicate sensitivity to all around her, coupled with her humility, has led many young people to be more appreciative of life.

Thousands of yearbooks have brought hours of pleasure to Sextonites, through the untiring efforts of Miss Fuller and her loyal staffs. Indeed, the degree of patience which Miss Fuller possesses is not only a virtue, but often a blessing.

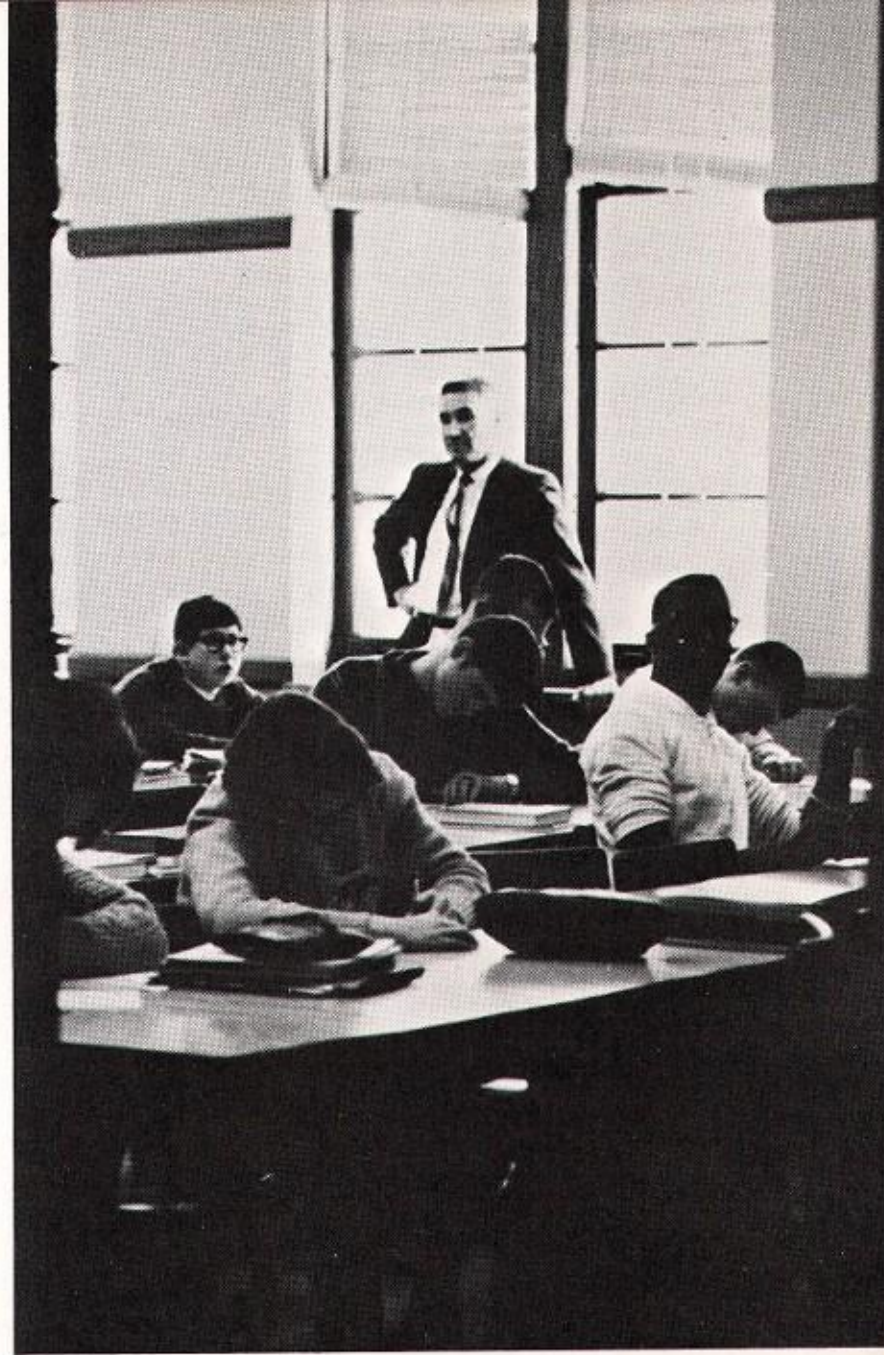

The 1965 Oracle staff wishes to honor Miss Fuller in appreciation for her guidance and encouragement, even in the darkest moments. She has served as Oracle advisor with true dedication; the school tradition has been enriched by publications under her supervision.

As she steps from her position as Oracle advisor, it is the staff's desire that only years filled with health and happiness await beloved Miss Fuller.

HERBERT CIGARD

Thousands of programs, tickets, and Zodiacs have been created under the direction of retiring printing teacher, Mr. Herbert Cigard. After forty-two years in the teaching profession, thirty-eight of which are in the Lansing system, Mr. Cigard will leave his long-time friends and acquaintances at Sexton. His contributions to the athletic, music, and drama departments have been invaluable, his efficiency excellent, and his products of highest quality.

Masonic orders, as well as professional societies, have interested Mr. Cigard. He is a charter member of the Lansing Club of Printing House Craftsmen and a past president of the Michigan Industrial Education Society, Inc.

Throughout his teaching career, it has been a great job to Mr. Cigard to find his former students successful in the business he loves so dearly—printing.

An unusual pastime of Mr. Cigard is collecting book plates. His collection includes plates from all over the world as well as many of his own design.

Retirement years will be spent with his friends, family, and his hobbies. Mr. Cigard plans to travel in the Michigan area, and to enjoy a bit of fishing.

Familiar people smile goodbyes;

"I was always building things...always creating." So states Mr. Howard Thompson, retiring trade teacher, who came into the profession through his natural interest in mechanics and building.

After originally planning a career in the medical profession, Mr. Thompson's decision to teach required him to earn his B. A. in trade and industry at Northwestern University. Highly sensitive to—and interested in—the aspects of the world of the complex machine, he completed additional work at Bradley and at Nebraska University.

Over the years, Mr. Thompson's love of people—as well as machines—has helped his career to extend from Mississippi and Nebraska to Iowa and Illinois. Many boys have shared his subtly refreshing humor, his pleasant sparkle.

For many years Mr. Thompson has enjoyed horsemanship and the rewards of training saddle horses. He has extensive collections of coins, stamps, gems and minerals. After retirement, he will continue his varied interests, one of which is the printing business. Life is a constant opportunity to Mr. Thompson—he looks upon retirement as a chance to pursue his various hobbies.

HOWARD THOMPSON

Filled with a deep love for everything—from the tiniest snow flake to the largest advanced comp. class—Miss Gretchen Doelle will bid farewell to Sexton after more than forty years with the Lansing school system.

Head of Sexton's English department, she possesses a most wonderful youthful quality: awareness of all about her. She loves life; gardening, walking animals, reading, writing, and the out-of-doors.

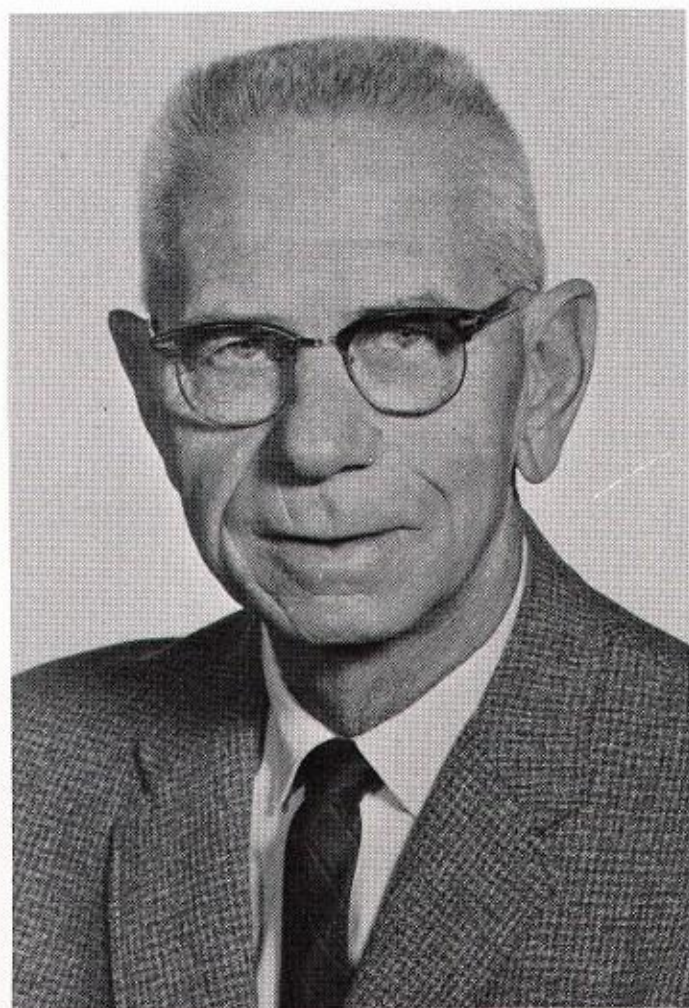

Throughout her eventful career, Miss Doelle, a former elementary school teacher and principal, has delighted many a student with her stories. She has inspired many a student to write creatively, and caused many a student to recall, "You taught me one thing I'll never forget—to love the sunset." Above all, she desires two things for her students: that they learn to enjoy reading and that they grow to be more aware.

Upon retirement, Miss Doelle plans to continue her own writing. She has a novel in preparation and she may possibly write for a magazine. Another project she hopes to pursue is the revision of an old Indian legend book which is a family heirloom. Her days will be busy, yes, and exciting, for Miss Doelle truly loves living.

CECIL NICKEL

Of all the wealth a man may possess, his treasury of friends and memories is the most valuable. Mr. Cecil Nickel, retiring after thirty years of teaching and coaching, has just such a treasury.

Many long hours have been spent by Mr. Nickel "doing the best job possible," and thereby making it possible for hundreds of boys to grow into strong young men through the athletic program.

Formerly an outstanding Central High School athlete, Mr. Nickel returned to Sexton in 1947 to become head basketball coach. He served in this capacity and other assistant coaching positions until 1956 when he was promoted to the athletic directorship.

A friend to all, Mr. Nickel will be missed by his associates at Sexton. His influence has been great, his leadership outstanding. Yet, life is a never-ending challenge to a man as richly endowed as Mr. Nickel. The years ahead promise to be filled with hours of adventure and enjoyment, as Mr. Nickel continues what he loves the most: working with people.

Despite the varied activities which students enjoy at Sexton, the basic desire of the school is to provide its youth with an education. Even more than this high goal is the desire to stimulate the student to explore for himself, offering expert guidance and excellent facilities for his growth and improvement.

Working closely with the Board of Education and members of his administrative staff, Dr. William R. Manning, who came to us from California, brings to a close the first year of his new administration for the Lansing school system. Following in the footsteps of Dr. Forrest G. Averill, who retired last year, Dr. Manning has taken over those responsibilities prescribed by law as well as those delegated to him by the Board of Education for the supervision and direction of the total program.

Under Dr. Manning's supervision, his staff carries out the actions proposed by the Board, among them the construction of new educational facilities and changes in curriculum. Of primary concern to the Board and to the administration is the educational advancement of the youth of Lansing. We salute Dr. Manning's first year in the pursuit of this ideal, and we warmly commend his progressive policies.

Mr. Christian H. Roosenraad

The administration of a school the size of Sexton is more than an eight hour per day task, as Mr. Roosenraad, Miss Lawry, and Mr. Shaft well know. The responsibilities, the details, and the diverse—but interesting—problems make their job demanding all year around.

Mr. Christian Roosenraad, principal, leads faculty and students in a cooperative effort to create a healthy educational climate. His many roles as chief administrator include overseeing all school programs, planning policy, and representing the school as its spokesman.

Mr. F. Cassius Shaft

Discipline is only one facet of Mr. Cassius Shaft's responsibilities as assistant principal. He keeps busy supervising Student Council activities, keeping attendance records, and overseeing the safety program. Always able to crack a joke, Mr. Shaft works with many types of students, and, as he says, he "loves them all."

Only a person with the personality and ability of Miss Elizabeth Lawry can fill the duties of the assistant principal in charge of extracurricular activities, guidance, and scholarships. Rarely does a student leave Sexton without finding a need to visit Miss Lawry's office. She always finds time, if only a minute, to care for each student's problem.

IN WORLD LIT CLASS, Miss Doelle stimulates interest in the arts with prints of famous works throughout the world.

Whatever interests and needs a student may have, there is an English course available for him. A variety of subjects are offered, including American, English, and world literatures, general English, advanced composition, business English, journalism, and modified English.

In the college preparatory curriculum, sophomores learn about the growth of literature in our country by studying American literature. As juniors, many students delve into the works of British poets, essayists, and novelists. They study such classics as Macbeth and A Tale of Two Cities. Seniors preparing for higher education involve themselves in a detailed study of grammar and writing in advanced composition classes.

Students taking general English courses find interesting lessons about applying the skills of writing, reading, and speaking. One semester courses that attract juniors and seniors are world literature, journalism, and business English.

This year the national experiment known as Project English was continued at Sexton for a second year. Designed to improve student writing, the program involved certain classes of Miss Ludwig and Mr. Ferzacca. Due to the considerable amount of written composition, lay theme readers assisted with the correction of work. Those who took part in the nation-wide experiment were proud to know they were helping educators determine the best methods of encouraging literary creativity.

History is foundation for citizenship

To prepare students for meaningful roles in an increasingly complex world, the social science department stresses more and more the relationships among men and nations. Also emphasized is the correlation between historical and present day events.

At Sexton, a student is required to take a survey of United States history in his junior year, and one semester of American government as a senior. To supplement this basic study of our democracy, Sextonites may elect courses in world history, geography, economics, and problems of democracy. Seniors meeting certain qualifications may elect comparative government.

SENIORS Chris Tanner and Carolyn Smith found added interest in American government class during the excitement of the 1964 election year.

The door to a wonderful world of experimentation and discovery is opened to Sexton students who take courses in the natural or physical sciences. In an age of tremendous scientific growth, students find themselves getting a taste of the researcher's thrill of discovery—even as they learn through simple tests in the laboratory something already known to scientists.

The first course of the science sequence is biology. Although often taken in junior high, biology is elected by many Sextonites. They become involved in the study of plants and animals, their structures, characteristics, and environments. After the first year, those who so desire may choose to take advanced biology, which is a deeper study of anatomy.

To many, the doors of the chemistry or physics labs symbolize their young and growing interest in the physical sciences. Chemistry offers a fundamental survey of the elements and how they make up matter. Demonstrations and experiments are a valuable part of a student's introduction to the chemical world.

Problem solving, experiments, and projects mean to many juniors and seniors: physics. While taking this course, students learn much about the natural laws governing our physical surroundings.

Mathematics growing in importance since first

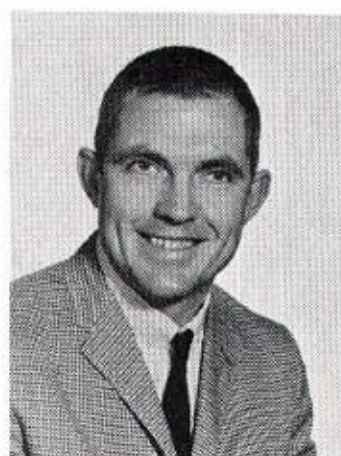

"HEY, MY FIRST 'A'!" grins Jim Morrow, one of Mr. Bates' algebra students.

Since Sputnik I was orbited by the Russians in 1957, increased emphasis has been placed on accelerated mathematics and science in American schools. The program at Sexton includes algebra, geometry, trigonometry, analytical geometry, logic and finite math.

Teachers stress the understanding, rather than the memorization of mathematical ideas in order that the processes learned may be applied to real-life situations. These concepts are also applied to other subjects such as chemistry and physics.

Language studies offer opportunities for better

FLUENCY in foreign language results in part from concentration in the language lab.

In a world where understanding other cultures is becoming increasingly important, the need for communication is growing. In an attempt to stimulate interest in this vital area, the language department offers studies in the customs and philosophies of foreign countries, as well as fluency in the languages. Students in French, German, and Spanish make use of the language labs to perfect their pronunciation and to authenticate their accent.

French teacher Rosemary Heist states that her principal aim is to stimulate her pupils in such a way that they will continue with French in college. Along with competence in the language, she stresses culture and the understanding of the French people.

In German classes, the students work to perfect the guttural sounds of the difficult language and learn about the geography and customs of Germany.

Where is Avila? How many South American countries are there? How do you say "Merry Christmas" in Spanish? In Spanish classes such questions indicate the importance placed on the learning of Spanish culture and history, in addition to learning the language itself.

Many Latin students comment that their knowledge of the classic language has helped them in English classes and on I.Q. vocabulary tests. In her classes, Miss Marguerite McConnell stresses the history of Rome and the fact that "history repeats itself," by the comparative study of cultures through the ages.

Generally, in physical education, the instructors attempt to develop good physical fitness in their students. As well as body conditioning, the program is designed to increase the student's knowledge and versatility in wide range of sports and to promote good sportsmanship and self-control, even at the peak of competition. The program allows the student to resolve his physical and mental tensions through participation in such activities as tennis, Swedish gymnastics, or volleyball for the girls, and wrestling, basketball or football for the boys. In health education, the student studies such subjects as first aid, mental hygiene, or alcoholism.

Business classes draw one-fifth of enrollment

Courses in the business department are a vital part of the Sexton curriculum. Drawing approximately one-fifth of the enrollment, the business curriculum offers a variety of subjects which are useful both for those interested in job training and for those planning for higher education.

Included among the array of classes are business law and business organization. Students in these classes learn the basics of business relationships. After taking bookkeeping, students know more about keeping accurate financial records. Salesmanship and retailing offer information about the complex world of buying and selling. Also included in the business curriculum is practice in the use of office machines, through which students become familiar with the operations and the application of business equipment. The most popular of all business courses remains typing, by which students learn the techniques of making forty-five small keys produce words on paper.

First hand experience in the skills of home management are offered to students through the home economics department. Foods classes provide opportunity for a student to plan, prepare, and serve well-balanced meals. Girls electing clothing develop the machine and hand skills necessary to fashion useful and original clothes.

The numerous problems of home living and management are discussed in social problems and home management. Job opportunities, family finance, and child rearing are considered—all in an effort to make youth better prepared for responsible adulthood.

Many hours of practice and rehearsal involve music students as they prepare for concerts and special programs. In the instrumental department, aspiring musicians may participate in Concert band, Marching band, Orchestra, Pep band, or Dance band.

Students interested in learning the fundamentals of singing and music theory find pleasure in the vocal classes. Offered for credit are Girls' Glee club, Cadet choir, and A Cappella choir. The Madrigal singers, an extracurricular group, is composed of highly talented students who consider membership a privilege.

A taste of music history, instruments, and classical music is offered to those who elect music appreciation. It is a one-semester course taught by the vocal music director, Mr. Frank McKowen.

DIRECTING for perfection

ADMIRERS Louis Haynie and Louis Houston watch intently as art student Karen Brackstone, Youth Talent Grand Prize winner, puts the finishing touches on her hall mural.

Appreciation and technique are key qualities stressed through courses of the art department. By taking general art, students may choose a variety of classes suited to their interests and talents. Included among the selection are crafts, design, commercial art, advanced art, and drawing and painting.

In the more advanced art classes, students work at mastering a particular skill by spending considerable time on creative projects. They learn to develop original ideas and to successfully control the necessary tools.

Mrs. Hardy sums up the aims of the art curriculum by saying she hopes all Sextonites involved will "be a little wiser as consumers, a little more knowledgeable as laymen—and a little happier in their spare moments."

Self-confidence gained in speech, drama

Mr. Harlow Claggett

"Good morning, ladies and gentlemen...." The well-prepared and confident public speaker is successful with even his shortest of greetings to a group. Controlling one's natural self-consciousness and stage fright is one of the purposes of the speech curriculum. Under the classroom guidance of Mr. Harlow Claggett, students learn step-by-step how to prepare speeches and deliver them before an audience. Before the semester is completed, students not only write speeches, but have time for several practice sessions. The other phases of speaking include the study of group discussions and parliamentary procedure.

The many aspects of the theater are introduced to students who elect the dramatics course. Although acting techniques are of major concern, make-up, direction, lighting, and set design are stressed also. Dramatics students are encouraged to assist with the traditional all-school plays so that they may see the "principles in action."

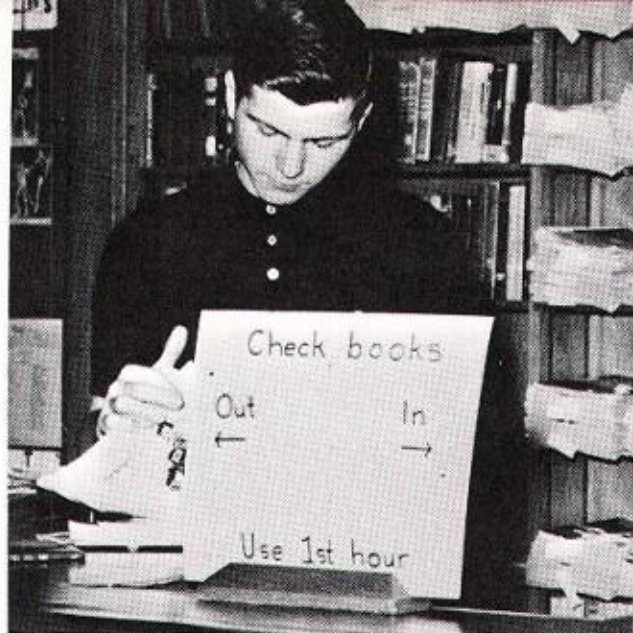

Research, research, research. For debate students, work is never finished, as there is always more to learn about the proposition on hand. Plans and speeches must be prepared; reasoning must be sound. After taking debate, students feel a satisfaction of knowing they worked on something truly worthwhile.

"THIS, my friends, is a genuine..." Dave Frank begins his speech.

GERI ANN COX, a junior varsity debater and a speech student, exhibits the poise and confidence behind the podium.

The heart of any high school is the library. In a well-filled library such as the one at Sexton, students can locate material for class-work and personal relaxation.

Approximately 9,000 books are available to faculty and students. Pamphlets, magazines, and reference books add to the collection of assorted literature.

Miss Donna Perrine and Mrs. Maxine Edwards are the two able librarians who are willing to assist students involved in any program of study. Miss Perrine notes that the library is for all students, whatever their educational goals may be.

MR. FRANCE demonstrates the intricacies of the brake mechanism.

Each student at Sexton, especially if he is a boy, is eager to take driver education in order to qualify for the privilege of obtaining a driver's license. In order that the student might develop the proper driving skills, the program includes controlled driving on the range and in the community, as well as class work.

Mr. Dale France states that his teaching aim is "to produce a generation of accident-free drivers." Stressed throughout every phase of the program is the need for a proper driving attitude. This most important factor is brought out in class discussions, lectures and films, covering such topics as the use of seat belts, the types of problem drivers, and the tragic results of an improper attitude.

Mr. Marvin Ralya

Mr. Herbert Cigard

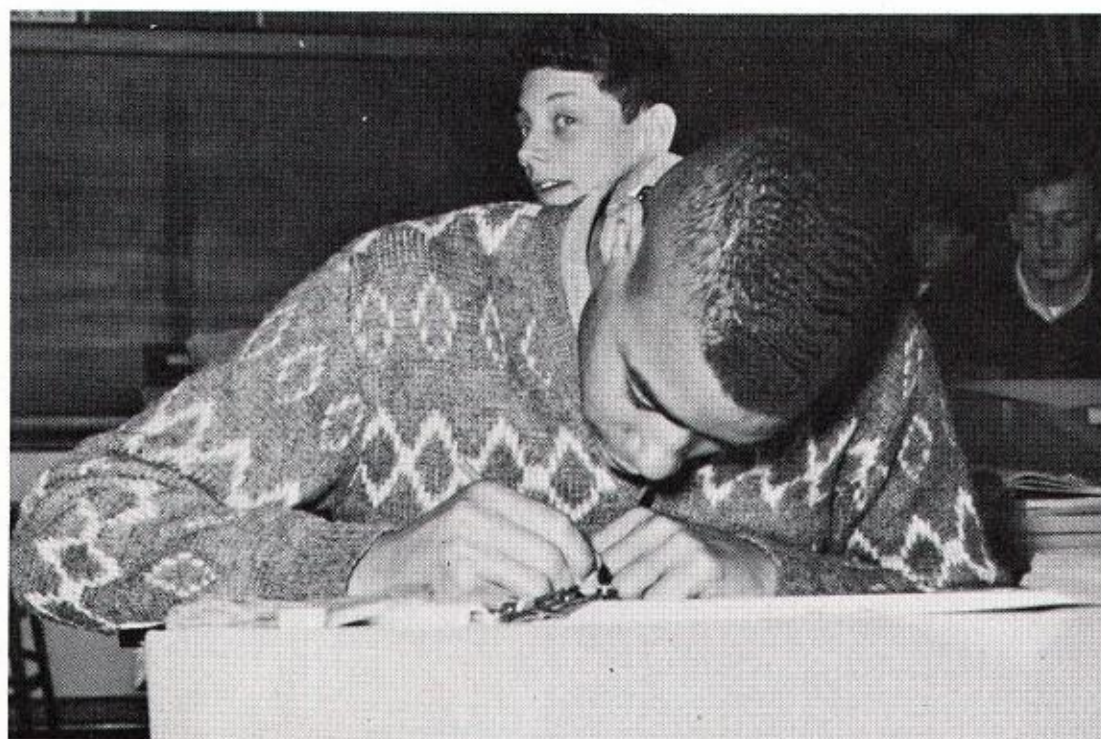

Today's automated life, as well as the proximity of several automotive plants, is creating a great demand for technicians and shop workers. To meet this demand, Sexton has utilized large sums in constructing and equipping the new vocational wing. All the latest professional machinery has been installed and a variety of skills are taught.

Drafting, a course involving design copy and mathematics, is the prerequisite for residential development. This is a basic course in architecture and construction of houses and other buildings. The students work with building materials, learn how to price goods, and design and construct their own models.

In woodworking the boys learn how to make furniture and other home accessories such as cupboards and gun racks. On large buzz saws, lathes, drills, and other equipment, they turn out quality work with proper fittings and finishings. Fees are paid to help pay for wood and equipment. Printing classes produce tickets, posters, and programs for various school functions and for the Zodiac, the school paper.

Learning about machinery in general mechanics, students obtain the prerequisite for machine shop, which offers a more advanced and intense application of mechanical knowledge. The small engine shop is one of the busiest areas in the vocational wing. There boys try to meet the great demand for the servicing of outboard motors, lawn mowers, and "go-karts." Also during class time, the students discuss engine design, function, and problems. Sexton is the only area school which offers auto body work. In this apprentice course boys learn the basics of body preparation such as spray painting and bumping.

When a student enters Sexton as a sophomore or as a transfer student, he is often in need of guidance and advice from knowledgeable sources. Scheduling, as well as the problems of adjusting to a new school, are two particular areas in which Sexton's competent staff of counselors offer their services to sophomores. Together the individual counselor and student review the three-year schedule, making alterations where necessary. In the student's junior year, he continues to consult his friend and advisor on questions of school life and academic progress.

Having developed a close association through his high school years, the senior works with his counselor to forecast plans for the future. For the student desiring a job immediately after graduation, the counselor helps with job placement and references. For the college bound senior, the counselor offers advice with the aid of college catalogues, career guides, interviews with college representatives, and with his knowledge broadened by the experience with those people and situations with which the student will soon come in contact.

ALWAYS busy, the office staff helps to keep school life running smoothly.

Work in office varied, demanding

Largely responsible for the smooth functioning of the main office are the three secretaries who handle the great amount of important paperwork involved. As well as typing correspondence and bulletin board materials, they perform a multitude of other tasks, such as selling tickets, sorting mail, and keeping records up to date. Miss Nancy Laing, Mrs. Lena Clark, and Miss Sue Hammond are always willing to help a student, as well as a teacher, with any problem in their area.

Every school day morning, before most teachers or students arrive, ten women begin preparation for the six hundred plate lunches sold daily in the cafeteria. Staff members specialize in different aspects of the quantity food preparation. Some are bakers, some are salad makers, while others are range cookers. Housekeepers work to ensure a smooth running, sanitary kitchen.

Because the cafeteria makes all the bread and baked goods consumed, extra student help is needed.

Several students aid the adult staff by serving food, clearing used dishes, and cashiering. Each worker receives his lunch in return for his services.

EFFICIENT helpers in the kitchen keep the lunch lines moving successfully.

MR. GREENLEE cleans the stage floor after play practice.

Whether sweeping the halls or checking the bell system, ten custodians continually work to maintain the building and grounds of Sexton.

At least one man is on duty at all times. Many hours are spent after school emptying waste baskets, washing blackboards, and arranging chairs and other special facilities. Students often take the pleasant grounds for granted, but it is the custodial staff that mows the lawn and shovels the sidewalks.

Two firemen keep busy watching and regulating the heating and cooling system. They also stand guard, protecting Sexton high school from the evil of fire.

Both talent and appreciation for music lead many students to strive for harmonic perfection in the instrumental and vocal sections of the music department. As well as developing their individual skills, the students contribute to the successful performance of the bands, orchestra, and choruses, which are as representative of Sexton as the athletic teams, organizations, and other facets of school life.

several public appearances

MR. CORBETT prepares to direct the band in the national anthem.

SEXTON'S REVOLVING DRUMS are known throughout the State.

"Hello. I'm from the J. W. Sexton High School Marching Band. To raise money we're selling pound boxes of Sanders candy. Would you care to buy a box?" In this way, some 2500 boxes of candy were sold by band members in a massive campaign to raise money for the band fund. The money raised from this and concerts is used for trips and uniforms.

Such funds made possible a three-day trip to the New York World's Fair in June of 1964. There the band presented a concert in the Tiparillo Pavilion. Other public appearances included the almost traditional shows at the Detroit Lions football game played on Thanksgiving Day and the M.S.U. Band Day on October 3. They also marched in the Old Newsboys Parade and the Memorial Day Parade.

Appearing at all home football games, the band also presented a half-time show at Battle Creek Central. "Musical Precision Drills" was the title of the band's maneuvers this year.

NOT JUST "long hair!" The orchestra, under Mr. Corbett's direction, enjoys playing a variety of music from Bach to Mancini.

Composed of brass and woodwind players as well as the vital string students, the orchestra rehearses once a week during homeroom period. The string section practices alone each day.

Although many orchestra members participate in the solo and ensemble festival, the main goal of the group is the adequate preparation for its spring concert. Orchestration is also provided for school musicals, such as CARNIVAL.

The World's Fair band, a hundred people strong, practices daily a repertoire of challenging music. Mr. Corbett works several hours each day with band members, helping them to improve their tone and technique on their instruments. Encouragement is given to those musicians interested in playing solos or in ensemble groups.

In the fall, the marching band prepares football shows and a half-time performance for the Detroit Lions Thanksgiving Day game. Winter months find the concert band practicing for the spring concert. At the annual event, an elected student conductor makes his debut as director of one selection.

One evening each week dance band members rehearse selections from their 100 number repertoire. One evening each week interested musicians can be found strictly enjoying themselves! Besides gaining relaxation, members of the dance band improve their technique and sight-reading ability.

The group played for a special all-school assembly in March. For the first time they performed during the spring band concert. Over the years the dance band has been engaged to provide music for local ninth grade dances.

Makes for Perfection

Many hours of repetition and practice are spent by the participants in the annual solo and ensemble festivals. Excellent musicians attempt to perfect their selections in hopes of receiving a rating of I, or excellent. Those placing first in the district contest advance to the state competition.

On the state level, the requirements are more difficult; students again spend hours rehearsing their music. Sexton musicians rated well in the state festival this year. Out of eleven entries, seven earned first place medals.

During the spring the Lansing Symphony Orchestra featured in concert two Sexton musicians, Laurel Tonn and Dorothy Elliott. Laurel's piano performance of Schuman's Concerto in A minor delighted the audience. Dorothy played a violin selection called Lalo's Symphonie of Espagnole.

Accompanists

Nancy Harrington, Diane Ehret, and Mary Bollman

Do-re-mi! Musical Accomplishment and enjoyment is shared by students who participate in the vocal groups. For singers in the A Cappella choir, hours are spent preparing Christmas and Easter music, as well as songs for other occasions. They received an excellent rating in competition with choirs from other schools.

The Madrigal Singers, representing the top voices of the A Cappella choir, work to present several performances to community groups. In addition, they contribute excellent selections to school concerts.

The Girls' Glee Club practices many weeks to capture musical perfection for its special performances and concerts.

Credit for the necessary "background mucus" must be given to the accompanists, who spend hours of time practicing the large variety of vocal music which students prepare.

Varsity summed up by coach Ed Majdeski;

"GET in there and show 'em how!" shouts coach Ed to Al Collins.

According to head coach Ed Majdeski, the football team played to its capabilities. They never gave up, and even after two losses at the beginning of the season, they came back to play good football, finishing the year with a 4-5 record. The coaches were pleased with the overall strength of the team. With a chuckle, first-year coach Ed added, "They're definitely the best football team I've coached at Sexton."

SEATED: king John Holms, queen Sue Giroux.

ALL the planning and excitement of the 1964 Homecoming festivities culminated on October 16. The candidates for king and queen were presented to the student body; over 1,300 votes were cast following the pep rally. Preceding the kick-off against East Lansing, the Homecoming parade of decorated cars traveled through downtown Lansing. At half-time, lovely senior Sue Giroux was crowned queen by reigning queen Rita Daman. Later, Sue danced with quarterback John Holms, who was crowned king at the Homecoming dance.

"AM I GONNA be the tortoise—or the hare?" Dave Stanaway shows the determination needed for a two mile-run.

BOB STOW is aided by coach Reid.

THE CROSS COUNTRY team was spurred to a 5-6 season by Coach Jim Reid's ever-ringing "Go Reds!" and by co-captains Bob and Rick Shannon. Faced with the awesome task of a two-mile course over "hill and dale," the returning juniors Curt Gwin and Roger Rook, as well as sophomore Scott Harvey have needed experience behind them as they look toward next year's season.

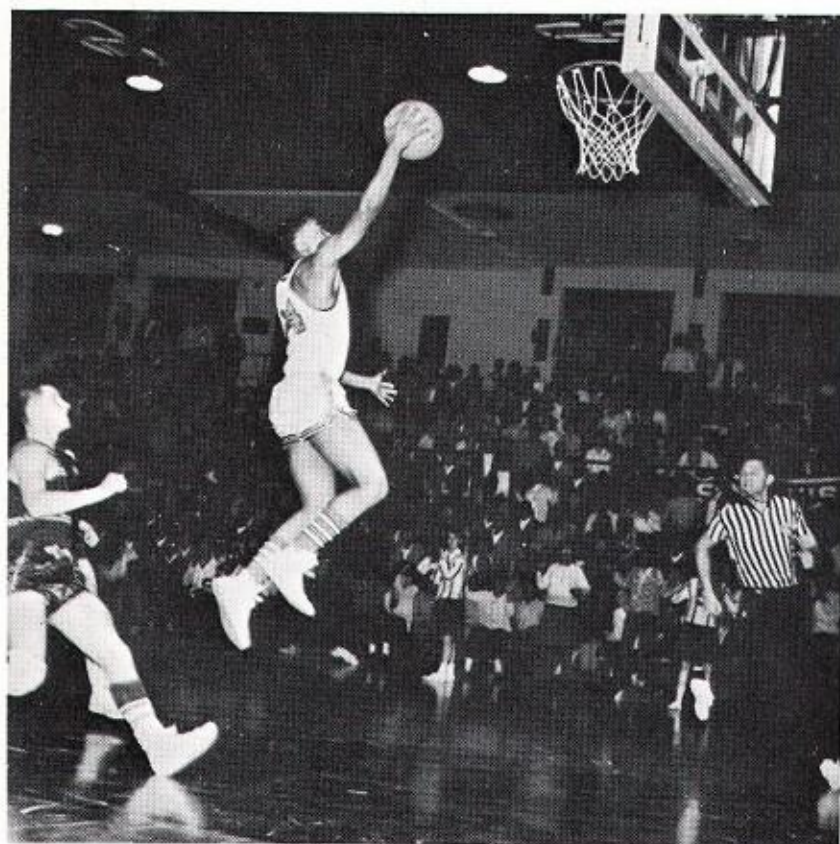

"C'MON, fellas, stre-e-etch!" The harriers warm up before a meet.

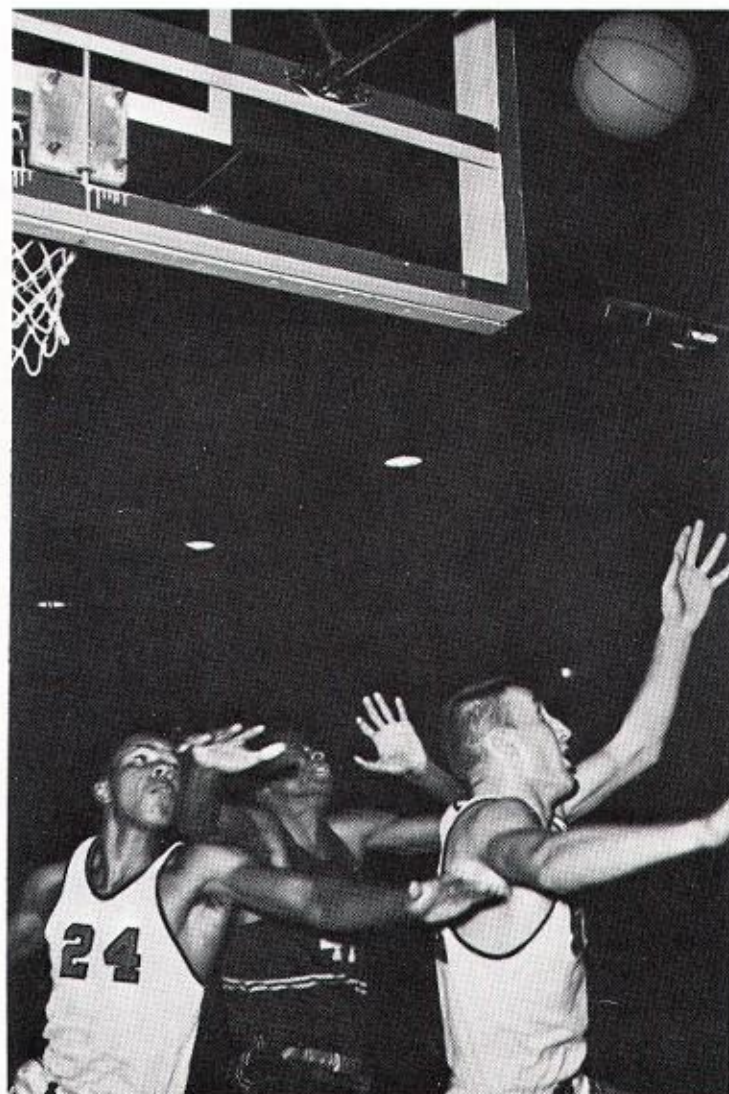

WITH A FINAL burst of speed, Bob Shannon crosses the finish line.

As well as good performances from several seniors, the 1965 swim team was characterized by promising juniors and sophomores. Two of the three tankmen qualifying for the state meet were juniors. Rob Flewelling swam the 50- and 100-yard freestyle to qualify with times of 22.8 and 52.2 seconds respectively. Ron Reynolds qualified in the 100-yard backstroke with a time of 60.5 seconds. Senior Tom Miller, who qualified for the diving event with a score of 236, had a total of thirteen first places during the regular season. Other seniors turning in good performances during the season were Terry Goucher, freestyle; Larry McKiernan, breaststroke; and Steve Gibson, butterfly. The returning underclassmen will be led by co-captains Jim Simons and Ron Reynolds.

"YEAH, coach, you were saying?" Al Mask, wrestling at 165 lbs., wins by a decision.

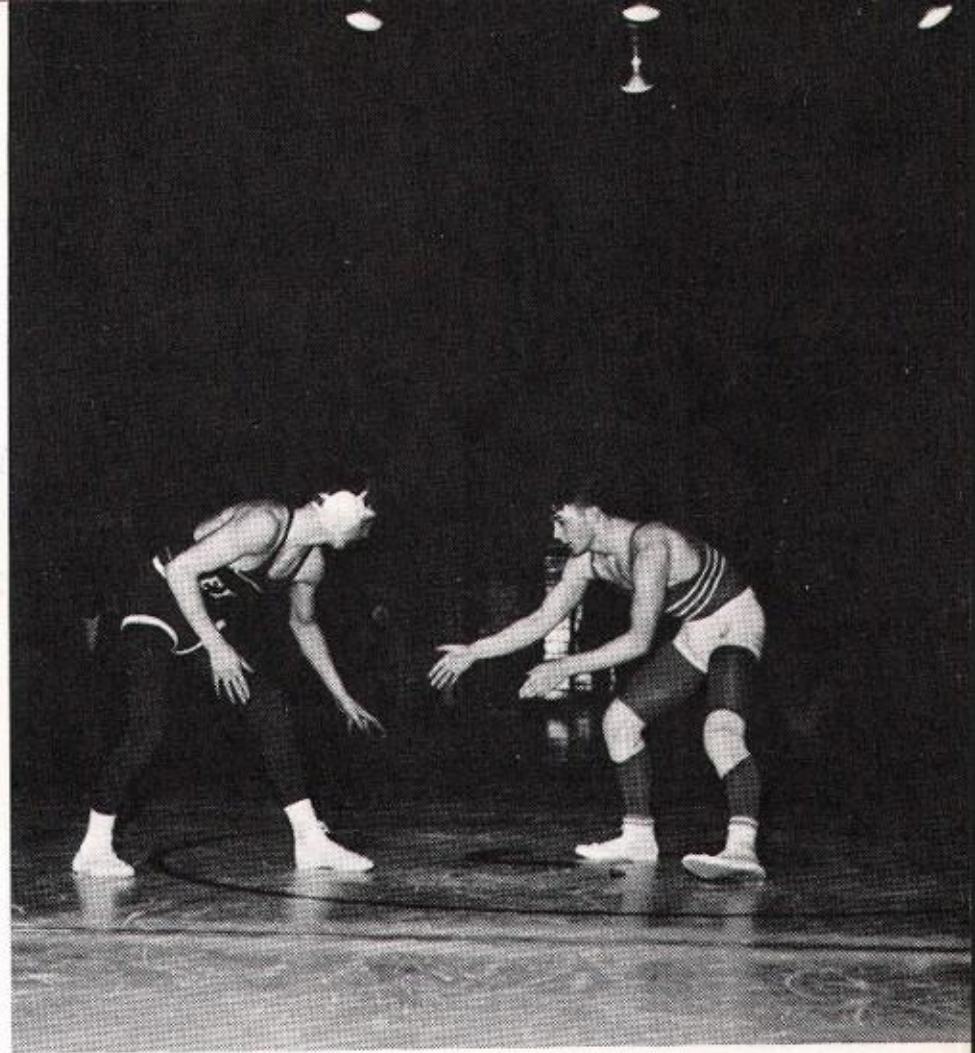

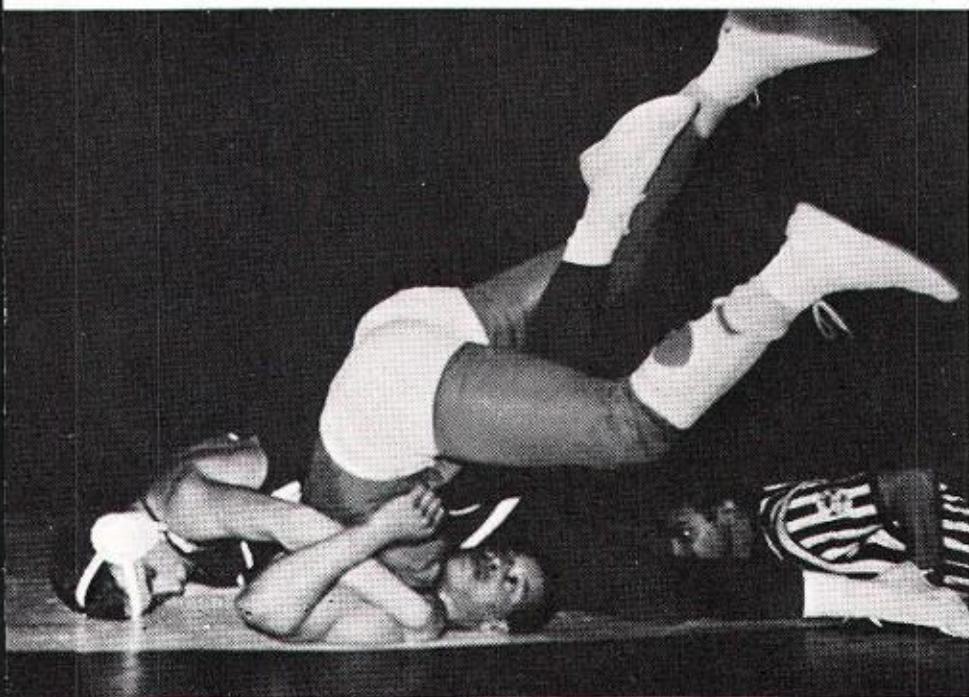

A successful season and a "coach of the year" title went hand in hand this year for Sexton wrestlers and coach "Iggy" Konrad. Although the boys had three close meets, they emerged victorious for an undefeated, regular season and a 6-A title. Going into the state meet, the grapplers were considered a strong contender for the title. In past years from 1948, Sexton has earned 12 6-A titles, four state titles, and 7 seconds in the state meet. This year the boys added another laurel to Sexton wrestling with a close second place behind Lansing Everett.

Reserves uphold proud tradition

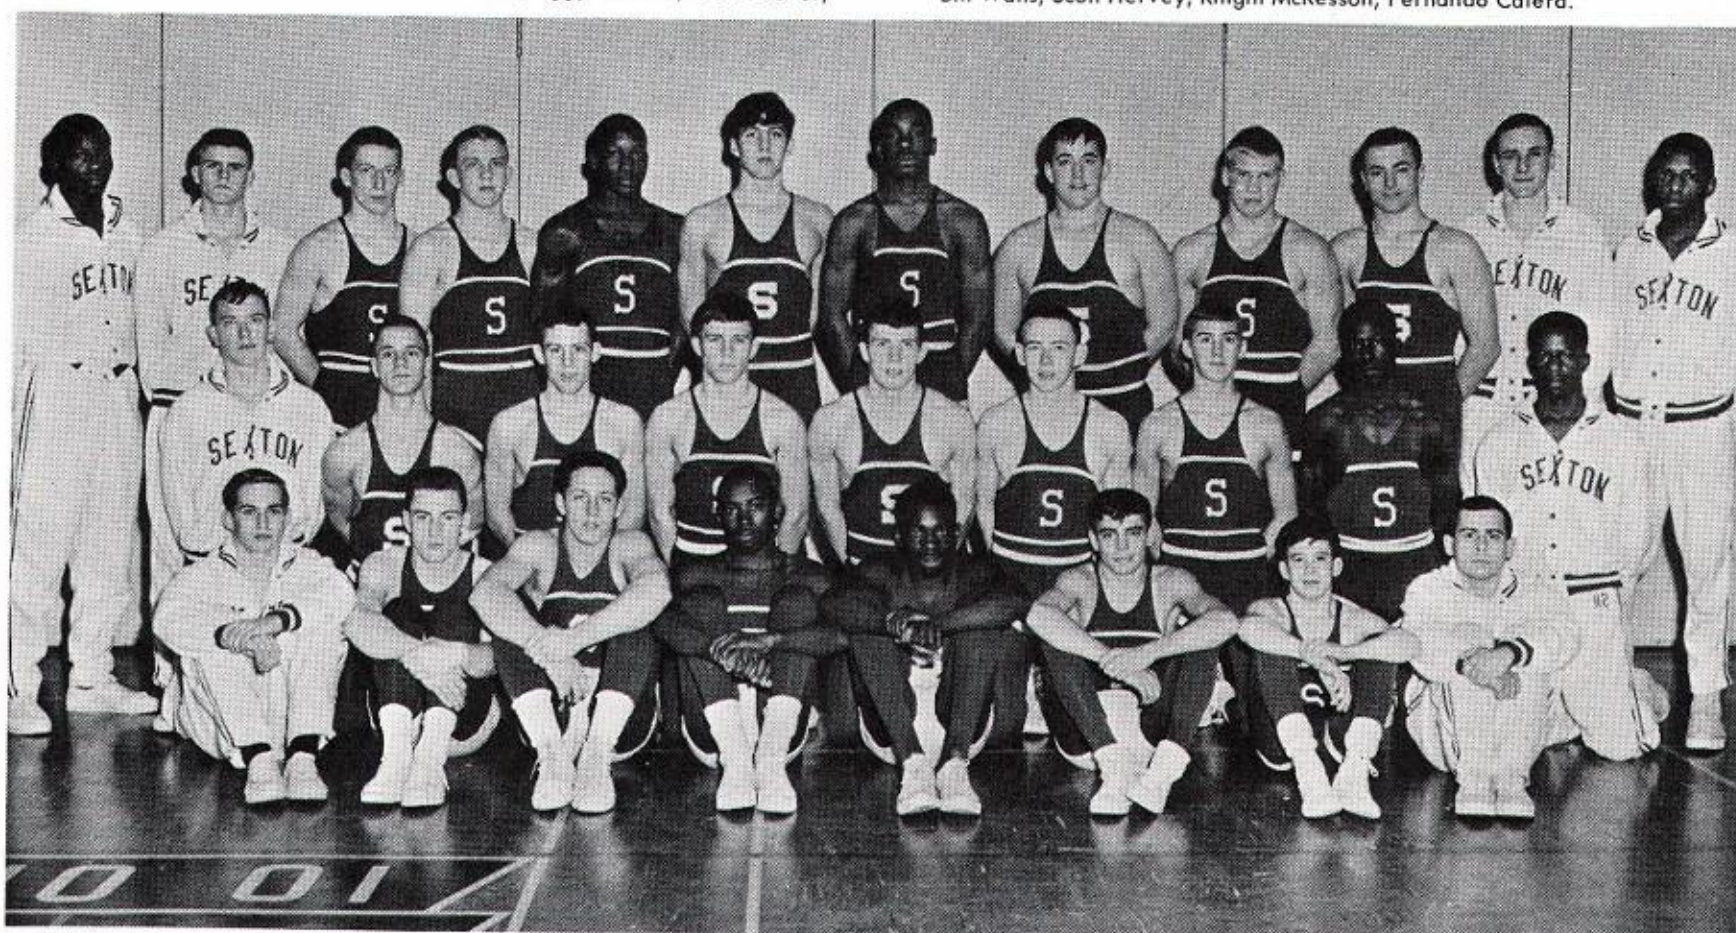

JV GRAPPLER works to continue the winning tradition.

The reserve wrestlers continued in the winning tradition of Sexton grapplers when they finished the season with a 7-2 record. Coached by the inimitable Konrad, close to fifty boys wrestled at least once, if not twice, during the season. Coach Konrad declared that it was not necessarily his intention for the squad always to win, but rather that each boy had the opportunity to develop experience through actual competition.

FOLLOWING the strong 1963 tennis team, 1964 netters also had one of the best records in Sexton net history, placing second in the 6-A league with a 10-4 tally. Brian Marcus was the only player who survived the regionals, representing Sexton as runner-up in the finals of the state tournament at Kalamazoo.

Baseball team

THE BASEBALL TEAM opened its season with four resounding victories and an over-all team average of .386. Powerful hitting, revealed by individual batting averages in the .400's and 300's, was a strong point of the Big Red team last year. The over-all record was 8-7-0. In the tournament which closed the season, Sexton defeated Gabriels 7-2, but was beaten by Howell in the next round, 2-9.

THE 1964 TRACK TEAM will go down in the annals of Sexton athletics as another championship track team. It captured the All-City, Regional, and 6 A titles with an overall record of 7-0-0. However, in the State Class A Finals, the team placed eighth.

Before the beginning of the regular season, the Big Red thinclads made a strong showing at the Michigan State and Huron relays, placing second and third respectively against more than 50 Class A teams. They placed second in the Central Michigan Relays in regular competition.

The Big Reds scored their greatest victory over the Quakers of Eastern High by a score of 101-8. Willie McKissic, high-point man for the season, paced the red-and-white thinclads with firsts in the 100 and 200 yard dashes and in the 880 yard relay. The closest meet was the contest with Everett High 58-51; a strong showing in field events made the difference, the score being 31-5.

Girls' sports

"THIS is the way you do it, fellas." Tennis enthusiast Rosie Hudnut enjoys nightly practice.

"SAY, these scores are pretty hilarious!"

"Shut him do-o-o-o-own." Making inroads into track at Sexton, Gloria Ewing sprints against male competition.

"YOU actually think that you're going to put that nine ball in that pocket."

Girls participate in water sports

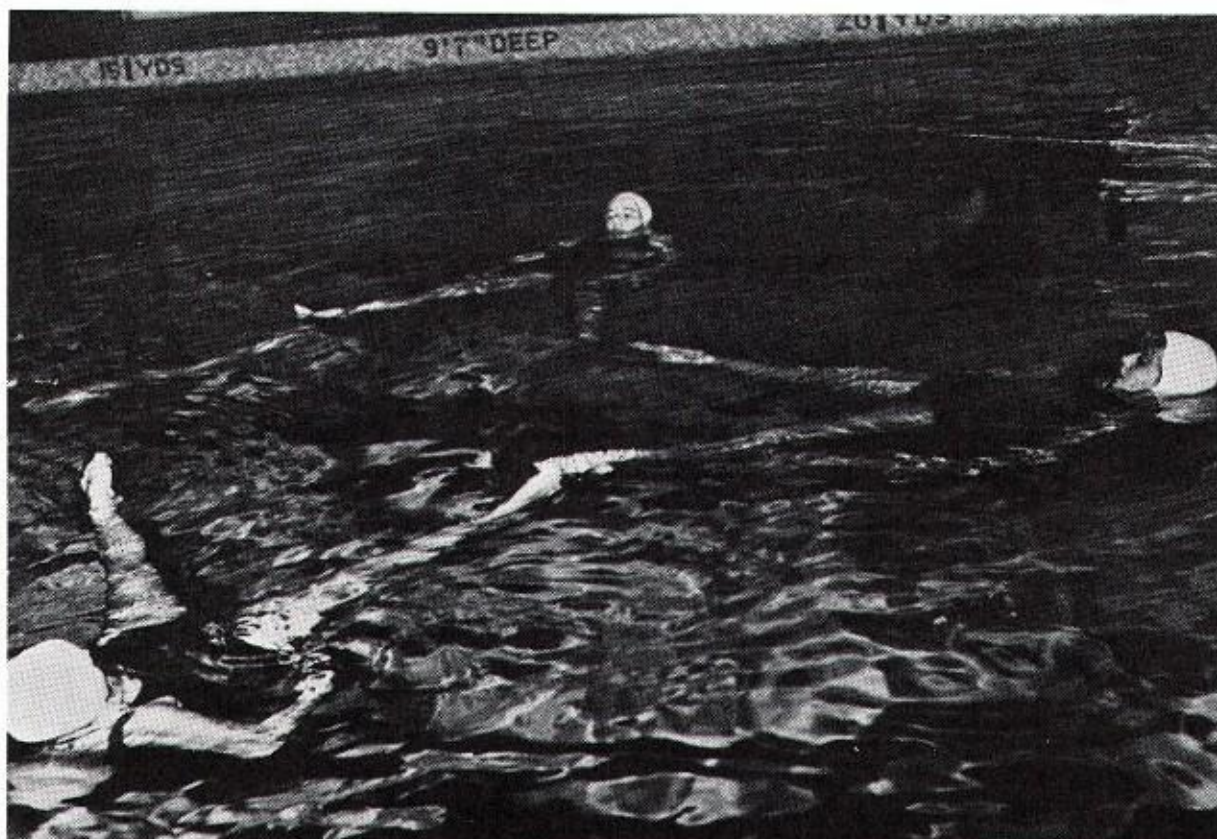

Girls athletically inclined participate in inter-school varsity speed swimming and volleyball. The all-city swimming meet is held annually in the fall, and the volleyball competition is during the winter months.

After-school sports include synchronized swimming and senior life-saving. Girls also enjoy learning the skills of bowling, pocket billiards, riflery, and archery. Basketball, badminton, and golf are popular activities, too.

Included in girls' sports are homeroom intramurals. First semester time is spent playing volleyball. During the second semester girls compete in badminton and deck tennis.

"WE don't have the fastest times in the world, but at least we keep our hair dry."

GROUP formations, as well as individual stunts, are part of synchronized swimming.

Long hours of practice cashed in second places for the senior and junior volleyball teams in the fall; the sophomores took a third. Coached by the gym instructors, the girls practiced various drills to improve their technique. As well as drill work on setting up the ball, spiking, blocking, and serving, the girls learned several methods of strategy.

Lansing Eastern hosted the meet. A strong Eastern team swept to victory in all three grades, despite a strong showing by Sexton seniors and juniors. Coach Janet MacDonald praised the work of all three teams, but cited the need for more preliminary competition for the inexperienced sophomores.

Boy cheerleaders, coached by Varsity girls,

SIX bundles of pep, the 1965 cheerleaders, clockwise from the top, are: Pat Kelley, Connie Ickes, Gloria Ewing, captain Kris Turk, Sue Bodine, and Donna Hultquist.

A NEW FEATURE this year at football games was the presence of two boy cheerleaders: Tom Miller and Lenne Milks. In contrast to the red uniforms of the six Varsity girls, Tom and Lenne wore white sweaters and slacks. After practicing with the girls, the boys said they gained a healthy respect for the skill and strength that cheerleading requires. The Varsity girls were chosen in the spring of 1964 by Mrs. Jeannette Achterberg, G.A.A. advisor.

J.V. CHEERLEADERS were chosen in the fall. The girls who tried out were coached by the Varsity cheerleaders. The girls who were selected cheered at a few Varsity games, as well as at J.V. football and basketball games.

Costume Day highlights year

"WE'RE DA BEST!" Kris Turk seems to say as she flexes her "muscles."

IN THE FALL of the year, a temporary Pep club was organized from the Student Council to promote school spirit. The club produced posters for the halls and sat together as a unit at various games. Not only the Student Council, but also Leslie James—the Sexton "Big Red," the cheerleaders, the bands, and several school clubs led the student body throughout the year in the support of Sexton's athletic teams.

ON THE LOOKOUT for the Big Reds, Leslie James was a familiar sight at football games.

ONE of the several student council projects was the making of pom-poms for the regional basketball games.

Saul, Poll elected in second semester

The fall semester student council, "the most active . . . in several years," continued old policies but branched into several new areas in the school's life.

Numbered among the necessary duties were supervision of homecoming, promotion of better school spirit and relations, rating of clubs, choosing of assemblies, and participation in clean-up.

In new areas, the council eliminated the serious problems that the school faced at after-game dances in the fall. Through action of the council, new graduation robes were selected. A car safety-check revealed the need for repair and improvement in students' cars. Twelve packets of books were sent to foreign countries with money collected for Books, U.S.A. Sixty-six dollars was collected from the sale of the Old Newsboys edition of the paper.

Other topics for discussion included nominating petitions, student phone director, boy's homeroom intramurals, rules concerning school dress, and a basketball homecoming.

"MY, an appalling deficit in the treasury, isn't there?" President Mike Saul, advisor Cassius Shaft, and secretary Jan Ells discuss council business.

Honor Society hosts gala party

The National Honor Society, with a membership of students showing excellent scholarship, leadership, character, and service, sponsored a large Christmas party for the Everett and Eastern chapters. The event, held prior to the holiday vacation, was highlighted by scenes from the show Carnival. After the program the one hundred and sixty guests shared refreshments in the Social Room.

Membership in National Honor Society is primarily based upon scholarship. To be invited to join as a junior, a student must have maintained a 3.6 grade point average. As 1 B's, initiates must hold a 3.5 record. In his final semester a senior may become a member with a 3.4 average.

High scholarship is not an insurance of an invitation for membership, however. Evidence of character, leadership, and service to the school is necessary for all members, both before they are initiated and after they are on the rolls.

work together to produce yearbook

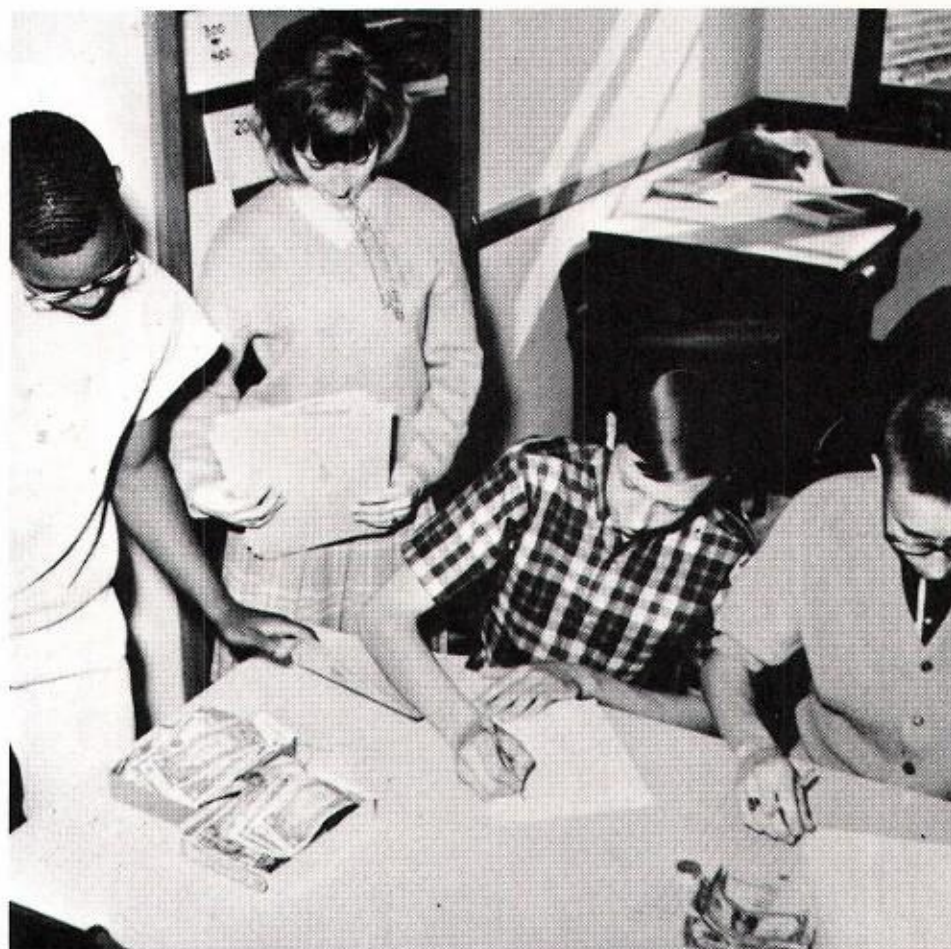

Securing contracts with local businesses is one of the most time consuming tasks of the Oracle business staff. After arranging the contracts, the photographers take the necessary pictures and the staff compiles the copy. The staff is also in charge of collections, sales, and distribution of the books in the spring. Under the supervision of their advisor, Mr. Robert Rentschler, the business staff takes care of the entire business transactions involved in the production of the yearbook.

Almost every high school student anticipates the annual arrival of the yearbook, the Oracle. Many months of long hours are spent planning and preparing the pages of the book.

The publication is divided into sections, each supervised by at least one editor. Pictures are taken throughout the entire school year, copy is collected, and captions and headlines are written. The assembling of the book begins in the fall, and periodically, groups of pages are sent to the publishing company.

The purpose of the Oracle, as it is for other yearbooks, is to present an interesting record of student life at school.

The 1965 staff gratefully acknowledges the help given by Mr. Robert Sikkenga during Miss Fuller's absence due to illness.

Eight times a year the Zodiac is published. The newspaper staff, under the leadership of co-editors, attempts to maintain accurate and complete coverage of school events.

Two junior feature editors are responsible for preparing the content and layout of page two, the editorial page. The news editor checks on reporters' stories and helps them make the all important deadline. Sports editors collect data on all athletic events and prepare the layout for the fourth page. The major task of seeking out stories and writing copy falls upon the reporters.

The Zodiac business staff keeps busy handling the advertisements. Hours are spent "running down" store managers, in an effort to obtain financial assistance for the publication.

BUSINESS manager Chris Tanner and advisor Cigard work out a problem on an advertisement.

Hours of work spent to prepare debates; efforts rewarded

Challenging, time-consuming, and fun describe one of Sexton's most worthwhile activities—debate. Discovering pertinent facts and developing invincible "plans" or "cases" are constant tasks for debaters, who speak on the one issue for the complete season. This year's resolution was "Resolved: that nuclear weapons should be controlled by an international organization".

The varsity squad debated victoriously all year, achieving a record of 79 wins and 15 losses through the regional tournaments. Rated second in the state by a debate Coaches' poll, the team captured the all-city title, the Grand Rapids' invitational, and the Battle Creek Cereal Bowl. They placed second in the 6-A league with an 8-2 record.

Junior varsity debaters participate in the Capital City league. A winning season was earned by the reserves as they finished with a 39 win and 21 loss tally.

The first week in April found the varsity debaters advanced to the state finals. After defeating Battle Creek, Belleville, Dearborn, and East Lansing in the semi-finals, the team met Detroit Cass Technical. Sexton's debate team reached the final tournament.

"If you can't beat 'em, kill 'em!" Mr. Claggett threatens an opponent.

Ten speech enthusiasts are chosen each spring to participate in the forensics meet. Students prepare speeches in one of five areas: declamation, humorous reading, interpretive reading, extemporaneous speaking, and original oratory.

Of the ten entrants in the district contest, seven people qualified for regional competition. First place winners were Roslyn Abrams,

Roger Chard, and Rick Reagan. Second place qualifiers included Judy Haight, Rodney Dean, Brad Lang, and Geri Ann Cox.

In the 6A forensics meet, the Sexton competitors placed second, after Battle Creek. Roslyn Abrams received a first for her humorous reading.

A cheerful smile and a helping hand are characteristics of the student help in the library. As well as rendering service to students, the library staff enjoys activities of its own. Some of their weekly meetings are socially-oriented, being held in the social room. In the spring they hold a staff picnic.

Before Christmas the staff suggested the Books, U.S.A. project to the student council. Of the $48.00 collected, four dollars was contributed by the staff.

"THAT'S odd. I never thought it was located there." As a part of their study, members gain perspective by examining maps and a globe.

Several speakers from foreign nations were guests at the meetings of the United Nations Panel. With a deep interest in the functions of the United Nations, world affairs, and foreign cultures, members extended their knowledge by attending sessions of Michigan State University's Campus United Nations in the fall and an international dinner in the spring.

On October 24, United Nations Day, members of the panel attended a special luncheon and program at MSU's International Center. By request of the group, Lansing mayor Willard I. Bowerman officially proclaimed UN Day in the city. Later in the fall a United Nations flag was presented to Sexton by the panel at an all-school assembly.

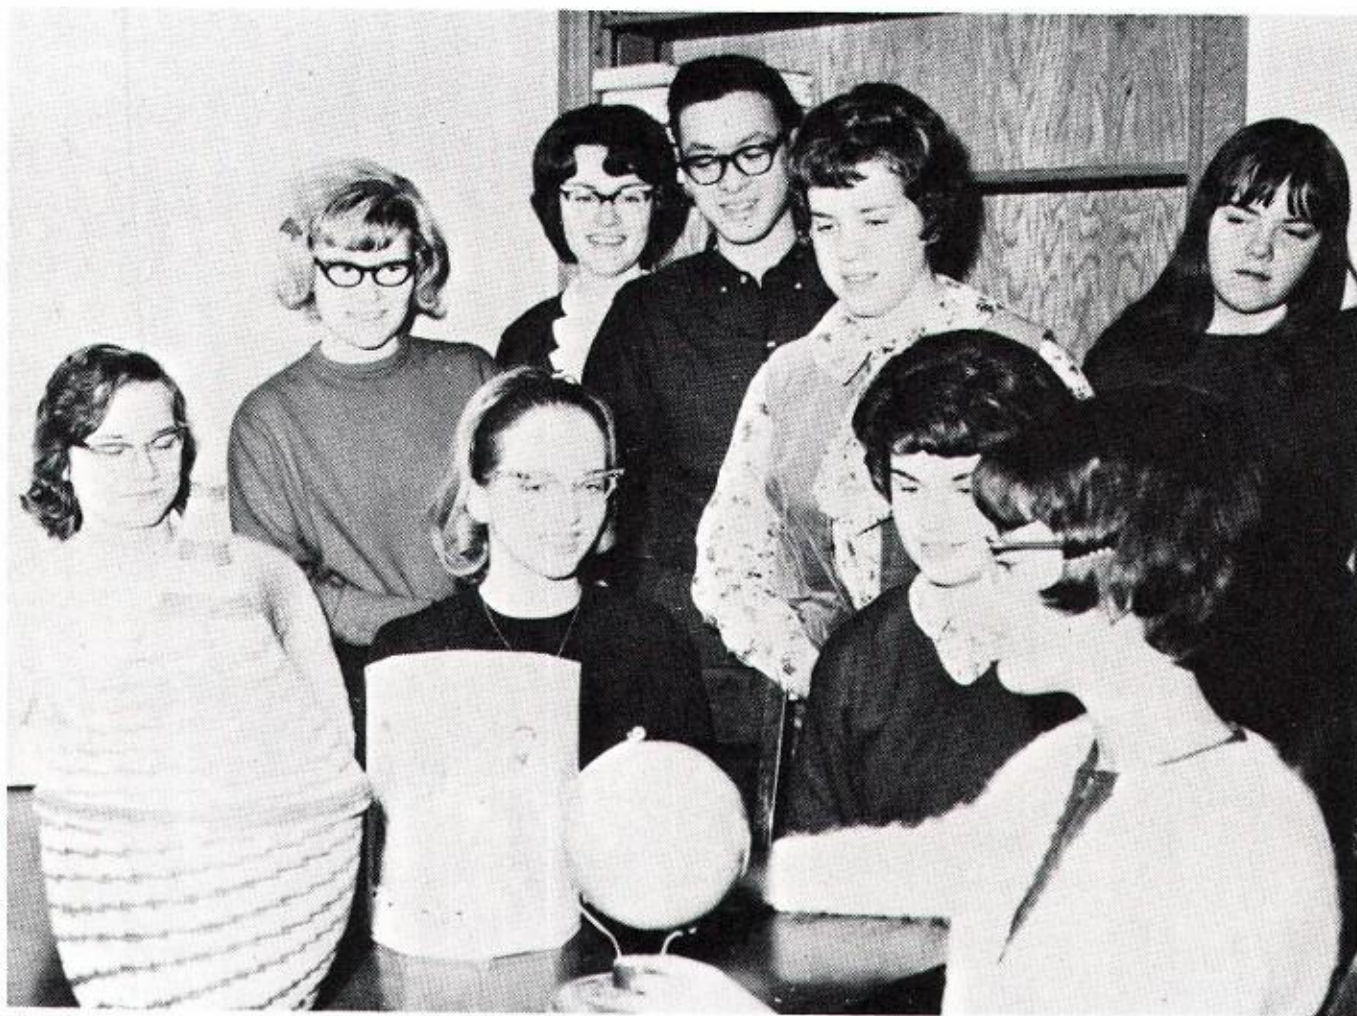

The major project of the year was the annual participation in the Hillsdale College Model United Nations Assembly held in March. Sexton students represented China and Byelorussia in the General Assembly where six hundred Michigan and Ohio high school students gathered to debate and vote upon issues of world importance.

Members strengthen Christian faith in activities

MR. CHUCK CRAWFORD, an active member of Youth for Christ, speaks to the Voice of Christian Youth group.

Seeking to find a name that would best express their purpose as a group, the former Bible clubs changed their title to the Voice of Christian Youth.

As individuals, each member strives to strengthen his Christian faith by participating in regular activities designed for this purpose. Projects throughout the year included the preparation of the Christmas office window display. During the holiday season, the group also sent Christmas cards to the faculty.

During club meetings, programs included speakers and panels of educational and inspirational value.

French club provides stimulating programs on French culture

As in past years, the members of Le Cercle Francais completed a busy year of programs designed to stimulate interest in the French culture. The club enjoyed learning the French National Anthem and presented skits in French. Highlighting the year was the annual spring French banquet.

"Fiesta" terminates active club year

The first major activity for the members of the Spanish Club was the decorating of a truck for the Homecoming parade.

Throughout the year the club enjoyed an ice skating party and the traditional Christmas caroling party at local convalescent homes.

In keeping with the purpose of learning more of Spanish culture, the group participated in Pan-American week festivities. To climax the busy year, the spring fiesta was hosted for all Spanish students.

CONSUL Judy Haight signs her "Julius Caesar" to a document as club officers look on.

Instead of electing a president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, the members of Hodierni Romani chose two "consuls" to lead them and two "quaestores" to record the activities of the club. Their meetings were concerned with Roman culture and history. The climax of the year was the annual Latin Banquet, held in the spring. Costumes, food, and entertainment were reminiscent of Roman culture.

Appreciation of Germany keynotes meetings

"THERE's the best Rathskeller in Germany, Kris!"

Members of the German club spent several meetings increasing their knowledge and appreciation of Germany and its culture.

The group listened to different selections from famous German composers. With the aid of newsreels, records, and speakers with slides, they learned about Berlin and modern Germany.

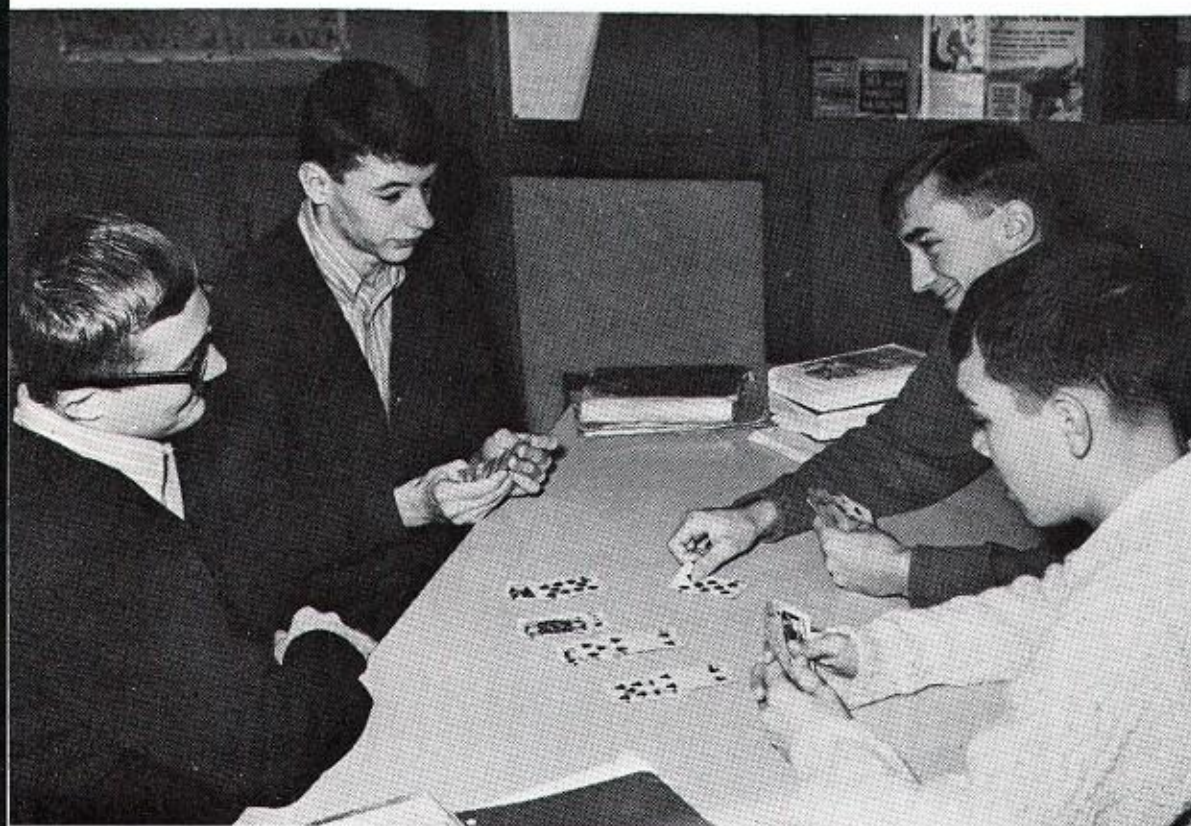

In connection with its study of Germany, the club attended foreign films of interest relating to their purpose.

The social events for the group included a Christmas party and a spring picnic, both annual affairs.

Mathematics can be fun! Members of Sexton's newly formed Math club can testify that the field of math can provide hundreds of entertaining and interesting programs and projects.

The Math club, which met two nights each month, was composed of juniors and seniors with "B" averages in math. Because the club is affiliated with the national association for math clubs, it complied strictly with membership requirements.

This year the Math club heard outside speakers from Michigan State University and Lansing Community College talk about probability and basic math principles.

Computers were of special interest; the club viewed a movie which demonstrated the fundamentals of the machine, and they took a field trip to a computer center. At the Christmas party, members joined in making and working math tricks called "hexaflexagons."

Investors follow "ups and downs" of stock market

A complicated yet fascinating facet of our economic life — the stock market — is opened up to members of Money Makers, Inc. Finding the answers to such questions as why the market slumped in 1962, when one buys and sells, and how is the market affected by seasonal changes, the club invites speakers from Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith and discusses economic matters with advisor Mr. Mann.

Buying with a profit in mind, the investors purchased shares of four stocks: Zale Jewelry, National Can, Air Products, and Crown Cork and Seal. They watched the progress of their stocks and sold them in the spring before summer vacation.

Meetings are designed to educate in Future Nurses club

Senior members of the Future Nurses of America club enjoyed a special trip to Flint Hurley Hospital Nursing School as part of the club's program of vocational guidance. All members helped make rag dolls for the pediatrics ward at local St. Lawrence Hospital. To help the members become better informed concerning nursing as a profession, the club hosted a counselor from the nursing school at Michigan State University.

Because of the students with medical interests other than nursing, the Medics club was organized as a branch of Future Nurses of America. A variety of programs was presented to stimulate the interest and supplement the knowledge of future technicians, dieticians, and doctors. During a joint meeting with F.N.A., a psychiatrist discussed teenage pressures and problems. Roger Chard demonstrated the use of Braille machines which aid him in his work and life. The members viewed a movie which presented information on facilities designed to help the deaf and hard of hearing. Projects and field trips included taking an Easter basket to the pediatrics ward of a local hospital and going to the Red Cross building in Lansing.

Sexton's FTA club is proud of its part in the pilot program for FTEC (Future Teacher Education Corps). Opportunity to participate is open to well-prepared seniors who, with administrative approval, can arrange their schedules and go into designated elementary schools two hours each day to help classroom teachers. For a successful semester's participation, the FTEC student receives one academic credit. Initial planning for this program was done by the TEPS committee of Lansing Education Association.

Although the Junior Engineering Technical Society took no field trips of its own, its cooperation with the Lansing area Science Seminar gave it many special opportunities to learn. During club time discussions concerning engineering and related technology were popular. Topics included light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation, accelerators, and the new field of speech synthesis. Some of the members working on individual projects entered them in the Central Michigan Science Fair and the Michigan JETS Exposition.

A succession of distinguished speakers presented a series of discussions on scientific topics for the Lansing Area Science Seminar. The seminar is composed of members of Lansing area public and parochial high schools; each school is responsible for its own program. In December, Sexton presented Mr. Voorhis from Bell Telephone and Dr. Hause from M. S. U., whose topic was lasers. Other topics serving as interest supplements were anthropology, water pollution, brain models, hypnosis, physiology, and solid state physics. Speakers added interest to their lectures with demonstrations and slides.

Dolphynettes perform for P.T.A.

Synchronized swimming is a relatively new concept in water sports. It originated in the form of float formations of girls moving in time to music. Today's water ballet includes a variety of individual stunts and strokes. The graceful execution of a chain dolphin, for example, requires a great deal of breath and muscular control. The Dolphynettes club officers, in an effort to learn more about the sport, attended the annual clinic for high school students sponsored by M. S. U.'s Synchronized Swimming Honorary Green Splash, where they were introduced to new and exciting concepts in stunts, routine composition, and water shows. In April the club presented a demonstration for the P. T. A.

G.A.A. offers chance for new friends, physical fitness

A LARGE NUMBER of girls participated in G.A.A. bowling at Westlawn Lanes.

Occasional pizza parties, playdays and picnics are gravy to members of G.A.A., an organization which gives every girl at Sexton the opportunity to make new friends and have fun while keeping physically fit. The G.A.A. Board, consisting of four officers and three representatives-at-large, one from each class, is responsible for coordinating the wide range of activities included in the program: competitive and synchronized swimming, volleyball, basketball, bowling, badminton, billiards, deck tennis and archery. An established number of activity points are awarded for participation in each of these sports. When a girl has earned 650 such points, she is eligible to become a member of Girls' Varsity Club.

Sophs received by Girls' League

INCOMING sophomores are welcomed to Girls' League by Judy Graeff, Joan Forgrave, Miss Elizabeth Lawry, and Margaret Rogers.

The Girls' League began the fall with the traditional reception for sophomore girls. Another initial activity was the financing of refreshments for the fall PTA.

The lamination of identification cards for the sophomore class and for new students was paid for by the Girls' League. Changes were made this year in the League's constitution. The written procedure was brought up to date with current practices.

As sophomore B's, girls are required to attend Girls' League in order that they may become better oriented to high school life. In the succeeding five semesters, membership is voluntary. The general topics for programs are grooming, home and family, orientation, and careers.

Styles, manners stressed in Etta Kettz

Etta Kettz is a club designed to provide junior girls with a knowledge of styles and manners which will enable them to step gracefully into any social situation. The Girls' Athletic Association and the Girls' Varsity club work closely with one another, for after receiving 650 G.A.A. points, a girl is eligible to become a member of Girls' Varsity. The Varsity members, voting upon scholastic records and personality of the candidates, elect new members who undergo a brief initiation.

At Christmas time the club enjoyed a party with the Varsity Lettermen. The two clubs alternately provide refreshments and entertainment. This year the members of both clubs brought toys for the Toys for Tots program. The Girls' Varsity also edited and sold the basketball programs and held a mother-daughter banquet in the spring.

More than a prestige club, the J. W. Sexton Boys' Varsity club is a service group comprised of varsity letter winners. Besides athletic ability, humility and a strong constitution are needed to withstand the rigors of initiation.

The foyer and the cafeteria are the proving grounds for peanut-pushing, proposal-making, beet-red initiates. Each initiate is also required to make a block letter "S", worn on a white ribbon over the shoulder.

The boys sell programs for football games and treat the sophomore boys to cokes during an orientation program. Pingpong, volleyball, badminton, swimming, and dancing are enjoyed at the "Fun Nite" each spring. The money collected is used for the club scholarship, awarded to the boy with the highest scholastic average and number of club votes.

In another effort to fulfill its motto — to create, maintain, and extend — Hi-Y assisted in the annual Muscular Dystrophy drive.

In the winter months, the group participated in the United Nations Assembly sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. For recreational activities Grayling seemed to attract the Hi-Y members this year; they made a ski excursion in February and a canoe trip in May.

Carnival filled with color,

Gretchen Goodrich was featured as the beguiling French waif in the tale of an orphan who strays onto the lot where a tawdry carnival is setting up its tents and finds it a wonderland of fun and excitement. She is dazzled by the carnival's rakish magician (Terry Lutz) but loses her heart to a gloomy puppeteer (Steve Rigas), a man who can appeal to the gamine he loves only when, hidden under his miniature stage, he manipulates his delightful dolls. The gaudiness and high spirits of the midway constitute an ideal foil for the endearing scenes between Lili and the puppets. Derived from the film entitled Lili, this gentle fable was written by Michael Stewart. Bob Merrill supplied an enchanting score; his lilting, haunting "Love Makes the World Go Round," which runs through CARNIVAL as a theme, was described by a New York critic as being "a melancholy strain of accordion music heard at a distance by twilight." Some of the show's other hits include "Beautiful Candy," a childlike ditty that the puppets and Lili sing together, the gaily rhythmic "Yum Ticky," the ballad "I've Got To Find a Reason," and the showstopper "Humming," sung by Rosalie (Mary Wolfe) and Schlegel (Jim Paskel). Another of the outstanding numbers was the "Grand Imperial Cirque de Paris" in which the puppeteer's assistant (Mike Coss) dreams of making the big time in Paris. The zesty atmosphere of the carnival was mirrored beautifully in the inventive choreography of Jill Carter. Mr. Frank McKowen, vocal director, became severely ill and was unable to continue; Mr. Earle Trudgen took over as director. Mr. Duane Corbett readied the orchestra for Mr. Trudgen's baton; his daughter Debra Trudgen, served as the capable assistant to Mr. Ferzacca.

into a comedy instead of a cause

Doug Dinkel, Mike Coss, Debbie Trudgen, Jim Paskel, Dave Beam, and Knight McKesson compose Saturday night's cast.

Tempering pointed sermons with sophisticated comedy, Herb Gardner wrote A Thousand Clowns, the story of one man's struggle against the forces of conformity.

Assisted by Sue Graeff and Mary Wolfe, Mr. John B. Ferzacca directed the cast in Sexton's production of the play. Mike Coss portrayed Murray Burns, an unemployed writer who delights in being different for the sake of being different. Knight McKesson, Jr. played Nick, Murray's precocious nephew, who learns from Murray a sense of individuality and cockiness toward life. The double-casted role of Sandra Markowitz was played by Kim McKesson and Debra Trudgen. Sandra intrudes into Murray's life along with Albert Amundson, portrayed by Dave Beam; they are two social workers sent to investigate Murray's ability to care for Nick properly. Jim Paskel portrayed Murray's older brother Arnold, who has learned to conform and tries to give Murray much unwanted advice. Leo Herman, played by Doug Dinkel, is the main character on a kiddies' television show, with whom Murray finally takes a job after he realizes that he will lose Nick if he does not learn to comply with a few of life's principles.

Seniors

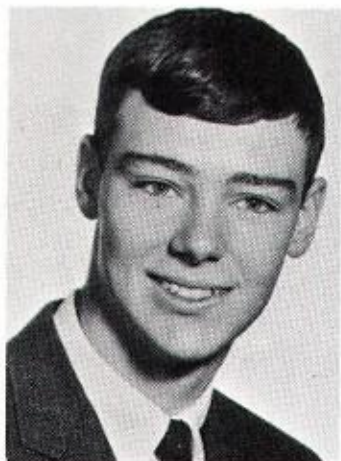

Department co-editors:

Mary Wolfe

Donna Hultquist

Faced with the complexities of a world in turmoil, seniors nevertheless grow anxious to sever the cord tying them to the smaller world of Sexton high and to take their places, with youthful optimism, in the American society. Some will work to further their education in higher learning, while others will enter their life's occupation after graduation. However widely separated they may become, they will always be united by the common bond of experiences and friendships shared at Lansing Sexton high school.

Underclassmen

Department co-editors:

Kathy Pomeroy

Jill Carter

As sophomores entering Sexton for the first time, underclassmen view high school with mixed emotions. Becoming juniors, they develop a sense of belonging and a feeling of being part of Sexton. These years offer exciting experiences and lasting friendships, as well as opening a new phase in education. Although underclassmen sometimes feel dissatisfied with their youth, there will come a time when they will look back and appreciate the exuberant, tumultuous years of growth and preparation for later life.

BRAZIL is one of the countries represented at the J-Hop.

For girls who attended, a passport holds the memories of a gala evening, and for their escorts an empty billfold holds memories of an expensive one at the "International Rendezvous," where the flag-lined entranceway opened onto a light-flecked dance floor, and guests were received by various members of the faculty and junior class. As the room filled, couples danced to the music of the Ron Gibbs orchestra. Effective lighting and tasteful arrangement highlighted the representative displays encircling the dance floor. Upstairs, the guests enjoyed refreshments served in an atmosphere decidedly French.

Advertising

Department editor:
Phyllis Franchino

Due in part to the advertising support of local business establishments, the publication of the 1965 Oracle is made possible. In return, these merchants enjoy the patronage of Sexton students who have seen such advertisements and respond to them by buying the products and demanding the services which are presented in the following pages.
